Las Anitas: A Family Story

Before Las Anitas, our family helped shape another Los Angeles classic: Cielito Lindo, opened in 1934 by Aurora Guerrero, whose taquitos with avocado sauce became a city landmark and a taste of home for generations.

In 1947, her daughter Ana Natalia Guerrero opened Las Anitas, just steps away on Olvera Street — the oldest street in Los Angeles and the heart of its Mexican heritage. What began as a small café soon became a gathering place for families and travelers, cherished by generations of Angelenos.

Today, Las Anitas and Cielito Lindo remain among L.A.'s oldest Mexican restaurants — still serving homestyle dishes made fresh daily from the same family recipes and guided by the same love that began it all.
